Faculty Success Newsletter

As we reach the halfway point of the winter term, we encourage you to take advantage of available resources, including teaching resources and services and, for faculty whose scholarship plans may benefit from external funding, Research Development Services. If you are teaching this term, this may be an ideal time to remind your students that there are tutoring services available to them.

We also ask that you continue to keep academic policy top of mind – we will send reminders throughout the term.

Please keep an eye out for communication about upcoming awards and opportunities to acknowledge and continue the excellent and innovative academic work at UO.

LinkedIn Learning Integration with Canvas

Beginning spring term, UO faculty can seamlessly include LinkedIn Learning material in Canvas course sites

Canvas integration brings several advantages to classes at UO. Instructors gain the flexibility to expand their curriculum with a diverse library of supplemental material, ensuring students have access to knowledge beyond traditional textbooks. Instructors can choose to have students view LinkedIn Learning content as optional activities or as required, graded assignments. Students can explore relevant material at their own pace, allowing for personalized learning that caters to individual interests and career goals.

The integration of LinkedIn Learning with Canvas not only modernizes the learning experience but also strengthens the connection between academia and industry, ultimately preparing students for the challenges and opportunities they will encounter in their future careers.
